

Wilson's Plover

Charadrius wilsonia

Historical Information

First Published Record: There is but one Indiana record of this southeastern coastal species. On 17 April 1995 J.D. Hengeveld discovered a single bird, believed to have been a female, on Fairfax Beach of Lake Monroe, Monroe County. This observation was incorrectly listed as occurring 18 April in National Audubon Society Field Notes (Brock 1995). The bird remained throughout the day and was seen by at least a half-dozen observers; identifiable photographs were obtained (Bruner 1996).

Status/Occurrence

Physical Evidence: Photographs of the Lake Monroe bird, taken by J.D. Hengeveld, are housed in the Indiana Bird Records Committee files and published in (Bruner 1996).

Current Status

The single record relegates Wilson's Plover to the Accidental (10) status category.
