

Townsend's Warbler Dendroica townsendi

Historical Information

First Published Record: A singing male, discovered by J.H. Campbell and W.N. Gray in Warrick County on 30 April 1979 (Mumford and Keller 1984), provided Indiana's first record of this western warbler.

Both Butler (1898) and Keller et al. (1979) failed to mention this species. Mumford and Keller (1984) listed two records and described it as accidental.

Status

Physical Evidence: There are no known Indiana specimens (S.F. Jackson, unpublished list) or photographs.

Occurrence

A singing male, discovered in Warrick County by J.H. Campbell and W.N. Gray on 30 April 1979, provided the state's first record (Mumford and Keller 1984). Jay Kendall found the second bird, also a male, in Dunes State Park on 1 May 1983; it was seen the following day by K.J. Brock (Brock 1984). A.W. Bruner logged the state's first female at Tannanbaum Lake, Parke County 19 September 1994 (Bruner 1996). The fourth record, described as a first-winter male, was discovered by S.A. Robyns at the Indianapolis Art Museum, Marion County 6 October 1996 (Bruner 2000).
