ascertaining that the software application exclusively transmits a unique packet, the unique packet selectively encapsulated by a transmit header generated from the unique packet; ascertaining that the software application exclusively receives the unique packet, the unique packet selectively encapsulated by a receive header generated from the unique packet; verifying the unique packet exclusively contains predetermined objects; and verifying the predetermined objects are necessary to the functionality of the installation of the software application.