

This Javascript is one of the most incredible pieces you're likely to see. It allows you to create a Windows Explorer type navigation system for your site using two frames. The best part is that the code is completely documented and you don't even need to really understand Javascript to use - just put the names of files in where prompted. We use this script for the IE5 Companion.