

This manual was prepared using DOCMaker 4.1.1, a system that produces portable documents for viewing on Macintosh computers. Mark Wall is the author of DOCMaker and the owner of Green Mountain Software.

The About entry in your Apple menu provides email addresses for Mr. Wall. Mark is willing to assist users of DOCMaker, even those who have not yet registered. You are encouraged to register as a user of this fine product. The cost, $25, will help support Mr. Wall's continuing efforts to enhance DOCMaker.

You can find DOCMaker in version 4.1.0 or 4.1.1 at the InfoMac archive locations world-wide, at AOL, or at Mr. Wall's Internet http site <http://www.traveller.com/~greenmtn/>

The Green Mountain Internet site has links for downloading the latest versions of all of Mr. Wall's software products and provides information on customizing services as well as on international versions of DOCMaker.

If you choose to obtain a copy of DOCMaker, you will be able to open this stand-alone document, modify it, and resave it with your custom changes. Additional features of stand-alone documents can be activated as well. DOCMaker has import and export capabilities as well as many other useful tools for enhancing stand-alone documents.

One word of caution - before you launch a copy of DOCMaker on your system, check the size of the stand-alone document to be opened and adjust DOCMaker's preferred size (in its Info window) accordingly. A stand-alone document that is 500kB in size may require allocating 3 megabytes or more of memory to DOCMaker. Stand-alone documents require far less memory to launch because of their unique method of reading in one chapter at a time from your hard drive.