Credit Card Security

There are several ways we protect your card.

First, if you choose to send your payment directly through your modem (an option you will have later) you will be automatically use a secure private dial-up network. These are private telephone lines to which only you have access. No one else can listen on these lines. Your transaction is as secure as it would be if you were making a hotel or rental car reservation over the telephone. Indeed, our transaction is even more secure than this, since we encrypt your credit card number before sending it to our network.

Second, your card will still be secure if you choose to send your payment over the Internet. As you may know, the Internet, unlike the phone system, is a public network which allows many users to see information that is sent through it. This means that without protection, your credit card information would be exposed to the public.

The good news is that we encrypt -- that is protect -- your credit card information with the strongest security algorithms available. We license this technology from RSA Inc., the world's leader in public key encryption technology. This means that when you purchase software using this system, your credit card is safe.

Finally, you should be aware that we do not store your credit card number anywhere on the computer you are using. Once you have completed a transaction, you can freely let others use your computer without worrying about whether they have access to your credit card information.

If you have further questions about how we protect you to make sure that no one can compromise your security, please contact us at info@releasesoft.com or (415) 833-0200.
