

About iTunes

iTunes is the world's best way to build, organize, and enjoy your personal digital music & video library with your PC.

With iTunes, build your digital music & video library by importing your personal music CDs or buying your favorite songs & videos from the iTunes Music Store, create your own compilation CDs to listen to in the car, sync your collection with iPod to enjoy on the go, and much more.

What's new in iTunes 6.0.4

With iTunes 6, you can now preview, buy, and download over 3,000 music videos and hit TV shows on the iTunes Music Store and sync your music and purchased videos with iPod to enjoy on the go.

iTunes 6.0.4 addresses stability and performance issues over iTunes 6.0.3.

Note: After purchasing music from the iTunes Music Store with iTunes 6 or later, you will also need to upgrade your other computers that purchase music from the iTunes Music Store to the latest version of iTunes.

System requirements

iTunes 6 requires Windows 2000 or Windows XP with a QuickTime-compatible audio card. Also make sure you have the latest Service Pack for your computer using Windows Update.

To create audio or MP3 CDs with iTunes, your computer must have an iTunes-compatible CD or DVD recorder. To back up your music to a DVD, your computer must have an iTunes-compatible DVD recorder. To use the iTunes visualizer, you need a QuickTime-compatible video card.

If you plan to listen to music previews or buy music from the iTunes Music Store, a DSL, cable modem, or local area network (LAN) Internet connection is recommended.

AirPort Express with AirTunes requires an 802.11b or 802.11g wireless network adapter, a compatible stereo system or powered speakers, and iTunes 4.6 or later. Playing your music with one or more AirPort Express base stations requires iTunes 6.0.2 or later plus AirPort Express Firmware 6.3 or later. Some ISPs may not be compatible with AirPort Express.
