

I am grateful to the many users who have contributed to the evolution of Tex-Edit Plus. Of course, there are several folks who deserve special recognition (alphabetically):

E.J. Chichilnisky for suggestions, feature development and extensive beta testing.

Guy Kawasaki for his kind support and for letting the world know just how great the Mac is! To subscribe to Guy's ultra-popular EvangeList, send e-mail to:

Martin Kimeldorf for invaluable help with the manual.

Christopher Li for localization, support and testing of the Japanese version of Tex-Edit Plus.

Marco Piovaneli for development of the excellent WASTE text engine, which allows handling of large text files. Marco also provided lots of help with Tex-Edit's source code and has earned my vote as World's Best Programmer.

Michael Rohde for the cool splash screen.

Ryan Schmidt for bug detection and various suggestions.

I use the wonderful Metrowerks CodeWarrior™ compiler and would recommend it to any other Mac programmer. Metrowerks product support is unsurpassed.

Most importantly, I want to thank my Paula for her love and understanding (and for letting me borrow her PowerBook occasionally)!
