

FreeWare

You can regard FinderPop as free. It can be included on magazine and Info-Mac CDs, etc. It was “PintWare” for a brief period; to avoid any perceived conflicts of interest while I work for Apple, it is now freeware again. I believe I have contacted everyone who registered the “PintWare” FinderPop to arrange the return of their $7; if you registered it and you haven’t heard from me, it could be Kagi tardiness, but please email me anyway.

While you're reading this, I'll just plug my other freebie menu-related utility, Popup Navigator (available on Info-Mac, and on my naff homepage, below.) This allows you to see exactly where your open documents are located on your disks by command- clicking a document window's title. Much like the Finder, really.

Legal Niceties and Contact Information

(The following text shamelessly stolen from one of Peter Lewis’ programs; names have been changed to implicate the guilty. I’ll get round to doing my own real soon now.)

This program should do what is described in this document. If it doesn’t, you can simply stop using it. If you paid for the product, and within a year find that it doesn’t do what has been described here, then you can notify me — Turlough O’Connor — and your money will be refunded and your license cancelled.

Turlough O’Connor hereby disclaims all warranties relating to this software, whether expressed or implied, including without limitation any implied warranties of merchantability or fitness for a particular purpose. Turlough O’Connor will not be liable for any special, incidental, consequential, indirect or similar damages due to loss of data or any other reason, even if Turlough O’Connor or an agent of his has been advised of the possibility of such damages. In no event shall Turlough O’Connor be liable for any damages, regardless of the form of the claim. The person using the software bears all risk as to the quality and performance of the software.

In short, you use this product at your own risk.

Note that use of FinderPop may, according to some theories, contribute to the heat death of the universe.

Contacting Me

If you're having problems using FinderPop, contact me and I will do what I can to fix them.
