XTension is a program specifically designed for small to moderate sized automation and security applications.

XTension is in itself a programming system, and as such it is possible for you to create custom systems which may be completely syntactically correct, but are illogical or incomplete.

XTension is only a part of a system which potentially includes hundreds of electrical devices. The probability of failure of any part of the system is real.

For this reason, Sand Hill Engineering Inc. cannot be held responsible for any loss you might incur due to failure of operation of any part of your automation system.
