Installation

To install FCSLock you simply drag it to the folder that contains your copy of QuarkXPress™ 3.3 or later. The next time you open XPress all of FCSLock's functions will be available from two menu items in the Utilities menu of XPress.

FCSLock is a “fat” XTension: it is compiled for both 680x0 and PowerPC Macs. FCSLock is also multilingual, supporting English and Spanish versions of XPress.

General Considerations

FCSLock is a QuarkXPress® XTension designed specifically for newspapers and other large XPress installations. This XTension will allow an administrator to disable any feature of XPress so that other users are not able to modify certain aspects of XPress documents. FCSLock can disable any menu item of XPress, selected tools from the Tool palette, and all the other palettes.

Every time you startup XPress with FCSLock installed XPress will operate in “Locked” mode. If the operator does not know the password he will not be able to unlock XPress or reconfigure FCSLock. With a supplied additional XTension you can modify XPress documents so that they can't be opened without FCSLock, this avoids smart users from removing FCSLock from the QuarkXPress folder and then opening your documents.

FCSLock ships with “1234567890” as the secret password. You may change this password to any other in FCSLock’s configuration window.

The disabled menu items will not be grayed out. This has been done to save processing time; graying out the disabled menu items would have required that FCSLock disable the items continuously in the background, and therefore slowing down your whole system. If the user chooses a disabled menu item he will only hear a beep. If the user chooses two times in a row the same disabled menu item he will get an error message stating that the menu item has been disabled by his administrator.

MENU COMMANDS

UnLock QuarkXPress

This menu command will show you a dialog box where you must type the current password (“1234567890” is the default password). If you type an incorrect password the dialog box will close, a beep will sound, and nothing else will happen.

Once you have entered the correct password this menu item will change to “Lock QuarkXPress” and the “Configure FCSLock...” menu item will be enabled. While FCSLock is in this “Unlocked” state you will have access to all the XPress menus and palettes, and you will be able to configure FCSLock.

To relock QuarkXPress simply choose the “Lock QuarkXPress” menu item.

This menu command will only be available if FCSLock is in the “Unlocked” mode. You will use this window to enable or disable XPress features.

The first set of check boxes that appear across the top of the dialog box are used to enable or disable the tools from the XPress “Tools Palette”. If an item is checked any user will be able to access the corresponding tool, while if the item is unchecked the user will not be able to use that tool.

Unchecking the “Arrow” check box will disable the selection arrow. The “Rotation” check box will enable or disable the rotation tool, while the “Links” check box will enable or disable the two text linking tools.

The next set of check boxes allow you to control separately the creation and/or modification of text boxes and picture boxes. For example, you can enable the edition of text boxes, but disallow the creation of such boxes. The “Other Boxes” check boxes affect both picture boxes and line creation tools.

The last row of check boxes allows you to enable or disable XPress palettes. For example, if you uncheck “Layout” the Layout palette will not be available to normal users, even if the user chooses “Show Document Layout” from the View menu.

To disable an XPress menu item click on the radio button labeled with the main menu’s name, and then uncheck the menu item you wish to disable. Please note that most sub-menus are handled by separate radio buttons. For example, the “Preferences” menu item has a * character, indicating that you should disable the individual menu items using the “Preferences” radio button. Checking or unchecking an item with a * character will have no effect whatsoever. Submenus that change from document to document, like the “Font” or “Color” submenus, are disabled like normal menu items, and they are not labeled with a * character.

The button named “About...” will show you the About FCSLock dialog box.

If you click the button named “Change Password...” you will be presented with a dialog box showing the current password. You can change the password to anything you like, but make sure that you remember the password or you won’t be able to unlock the program the next time.

How to get in contact with us

Please send us your registration card since that will allow us to offer you bug fixes and future upgrades. If you commonly use e-mail, give us your electronic address, this will allow us to send you bug fixes and small upgrades for free.
