

Macintosh

With the ever growing iMac clan 1984 thinks we'd better keep up! Here are a few little places to go & people to see if your on the net this evening [or at the office if you can get away with it].

The Little iMac Book

<http://www.amazon.com/exec/obidos/ASIN/0201354217/travelsinhyperre>

By the excellent Robin Williams [not the Robin 'Good Morning Vietnam' Williams the other one]. This is one of those MUST HAVE'S and companion to sit next to your Mac keeping it warm at night.

Apple's PDF manuals

Interested in what makes your iMac tick? Apple has released a pdf document of its own. iMac developer notes detailing the iMac's architecture.

http://developer.apple.com/techpubs/hardware/Developer_Notes/iMac/iMacDevNote.pdf

Also you could visit Apple's new-improved iMac section while you at the above link.

<http://www.apple.com/imac/>

A site PACKED full of iMac related information whether it be movies, clips, text, pdf's and more.

Remember to check out the news updates and benefits of USB Peripherals.

<http://www.apple.com/usb/>

Good links

<http://www.theimac.com/tech.shtml>

Technical aspects

<http://www.themacintoshguy.com/lists/MacUSBFAQ.shtml>

A link to join the Macintosh USB Talk List. A monitored discussion list for all USB questions, a good starting place for the curious and the new user. Follow the on screen info the sign yourself up.

<http://www.mactimes.com/imac/list.shtml>

Another mailing list. The iMac Channel's mailing list provides a very diverse talk range of subjects. You can't do now wrong if you sign up to this the day you get you iMac.

General

<http://www.macsoftware.apple.com/>

The Macintosh Guide is where you can get the latest and greatest information about hardware and software products available not just for the iMac but for any new Macintosh.

 Darren