

e: Last Month's Column

Well, after last month's column, all I can say is "Dang, I'm good!" I've received countless emails (ok, yes, that's only because I can't count) from amazed readers inquiring about my psychic abilities. How did I know that a few days after the release of the January issue of Apple Wizards, Connectix would release the Virtual Game Station? Did my column foreshadow that event? And, if I am psychic, why didn't I foresee any of the other surprise announcements from Apple, Id, and others?

Well, you readers do need some surprises in life, but now you know to read Mac Junkie very carefully. You'll never know when that USB yo-yo accessory I may mention will be released. Now I've got you guessing, and that's just perfect for me! [Insert evil, sadistic laugh here.]

y Thoughts about the New G3s might go so pudding. However, about aesthetic something has would look 90s style

from Apple,

I like the new Yosemite systems. In fact, I just far as to say that they kick total banana I really wish that Steve had come to me suggestions. Since I first saw the new G3, always seemed missing. Then it hit me! It so much cooler with a mohawk! Mix the late with staple 80s punk. Of course, this being designs and needs neato too, but and chain (a has ever me like you could get that mohawk in several "flavors" too. With a computer that cool, who racing stripes? Well, I guess those would be then you'd have to buy your Mac a wallet kind "howdy" to every friend and reader who tripped over their own chain... you entertain nothing else).

ive Your Mac a Friend

Remember Tamagotchies? Those virtual pets in tiny handheld lastic eggs...and no, not those pantyhose eggs? In this world of flash fads, some cool toys get mixed in the rush and then practically disappear a year later, way before their time.
Tamagotchies are but one of those cool toys... remember Laser Tag (although I've heard that it's making a comeback)? I was at a local Toyz "R" U the other day and the Tamagotchi phenomenon had gone from something like $20 a piece last year to being thrust into the $3 bin! now is the perfect time to buy one for your Mac.

speech recognition a Furby is the pet will make him most important Tamagotchi or the that you may you fail to get the Mac personalities

Although I still think setting up and IR linking on your Mac with future, giving your Mac a virtual or her happier. And isn't that the thing? Getting your new G3 a Connectix VGS may make it so happy never experience a crash again. If connection, read my column about is a healthy from a few months ago. A happy Mac Mac!

Note: If anyone knows how to connect a Digimon to a Mac for training and sparring, e-mail me at the usual location, macjunkie@applewizards.net .

Quick Thought About the New iMacs

I refuse to sink to the level of being the four billionth writer to mention the hilarities of the Macworld keynote by Steve Jobs, the iCEO (oops, I did it!). The speech pretty much made my day, but only one thing about the whole thing bothered me... they removed the mezzanine slot from the iMac! I guess I'll just have to hope that a USB toaster is made soon if I want to get a new one...

inal Thought of the Month

Yep, this is it. I refuse to think anymore this month. This last paragraph serves no real purpose but to give me opportunity to use the word Spunky! Steve Jobs is the King of Spunk. The new G3s are spunky... and Bill Gates is Spunky Brewster. Now that I think about it, I'm not sure if that was a good enough reason to include this paragraph, but maybe this will annoy Editor Erik, and that's good enough reason for me. See you all next month...

Mac Junkie
macjunkie@applewizards.net

<http://applewizards.net/>