Lists the color palette that your SiS display adapter supports.

Increases or decreases the amount of information that appears on your screen. Your SiS display adapter determines whether you can change this setting. This is sometimes referred to as "resolution".

Changes the size of the text that Windows displays.	. If this setting is (	unavailable, you can n	ot change the font size.

Increases or decreases the speed of the monitor scanlines that appears on your screen. Your SiS display adapter and monitor determine how you can change this setting. This is sometimes referred to as "refresh rate".

Shows the SiS display adapter type and version of this "SiS settings".

Shows how the current settings will look on your screen.

Remains the speed of the monitor scanlines that appears on your screen as the BIOS setting. This setting will not be changed when Windows is started. This is sometimes referred to as "refresh rate".

percentage	arge the current sc n this combo box.

Provides a way for you to calibrate the dimensions, hold the ruler up to your	ne fonts your computer or display, and then drag	displays. If you want to cal the ruler that appears on	ibrate your display to actual the screen to match it.

Shows how the percentage that appears above affects the size of the text that will appea	ar on your screen.

Closes this dialog and saves any changes you have made.

Closes this dialog without saving any changes you have made.

Help is available for each item in this grou you want information about.	up. Click "?" at the t	op of this dialog box,	and then click the s	pecific item

Click this button to install the software for a new display adapter or monitor.